Reading More Than the Weather

How Genesis Energy turned weather data into a customer-acquisition signal

Genesis Energy × PHD × Google

Case study | Matthew Batcheldor | New Zealand, 2018

TEMPERATURE SHOCK

Illustrative only. Not campaign data.

Energy matters, but it is hard to make interesting

Genesis wanted to win more customers without falling back on yet another price-led energy campaign.

What we knew

Cold weather changes how households use energy.

What we didn't know

Exactly when the weather creates the best moment to win a new customer.

The opportunity

Turn a broad weather link into a precise, region-by-region media trigger.

THE BREAKTHROUGH

Analysis of tens of thousands of data points uncovered “temperature shock”: a sudden change in the weather that signalled the moment customers were most receptive.

A weather signal became a live media decision

The insight only mattered once it could change what people saw, in the right region, at the right time.

1

Weather + behaviour

Combine climate patterns with customer behaviour data.

2

Temperature shock

Spot the sudden change in conditions linked to opportunity.

3

Regional trigger

Respond to sudden weather changes, region by region.

4

Media pivot

Switch the advertising message when customers were most receptive.

THE OUTCOME

A measurable increase in customer acquisition for Genesis Energy (PHD). The campaign also won Bronze for Digital Innovation at the 2018 Tangrams.

MY ROLE | GOOGLE SENIOR INDUSTRY LEAD

I led Google's senior relationship with Genesis Energy and worked directly with PHD to turn the "temperature shock" insight into a data-driven media solution that could run live.

Senior client leadership

Owned the senior Google relationship with Genesis Energy.

Agency partnership

Worked hand in hand with PHD on campaign activation.

Google data + resources

Brought in Google resources and live data through Google systems and tools.
